Gavin Maggs was appointed the Director of Development and Alumni Relations in November 2011; he had served as the Deputy Director since 2008. He is directly responsible to the Vice-Chancellor for the University’s philanthropic fundraising and alumni relations activities.

A graduate of the University of Oxford with an MA in Literae Humaniores, he began his fundraising career at his college, Lincoln, then joined the University of Warwick to lead the development and alumni relations activities of the then recently established Warwick Medical School.

Gavin is a keen sportsman, although in recent years his young family have turned him from practitioner rather more into an armchair fan.

As the University approaches its 50th Anniversary in 2016, he is looking forward to harnessing the sense of pride felt by many in their alma mater and articulating the role that Bath can continue to play in the lives of our graduates and friends so that we might celebrate in style.
