April 2017 Director’s Note:

On Saturday, May 06 CDAS is participating in the University of Bath’s 50th Anniversary Festival. There is more information about what we are doing that day in this month’s newsletter, but I wanted to flag it up here.

The University has spent the last year creating and producing a number of different 50th Anniversary events and next Saturday will be a fantastic opportunity to see the kinds of research CDAS currently supports.

Everything happening that day is open to the public, so if you are anywhere near Bath then come on up the hill and see us. CDAS will be in the Discover Zone. I suggested that we call it the Dead Zone, but the University planning team didn’t go for that idea.

Saturday will also be CDAS’s contribution to Dying Matters Awareness Week (http://www.dyingmatters.org/page/AwarenessWeek2017), which actually starts on May 8 but we are getting the party started early. It is marvellous to see how the annual Dying Matters week has grown in size over the years and there will be events all over the country.

You can find more information about the Festival on the University web page: http://www.bath.ac.uk/campaigns/come-to-the-university-of-bath-festival-2017/ Like the event on Facebook to get all the latest news or follow on twitter @UniofBath #bathunifest

CDAS Seminar: Terror Management Theory
04 May 2017, 14.15 – 17.00
3 East 2.4, University of Bath, UK

Drawing on cultural anthropologist Ernest Becker’s work, terror management theory (TMT) posits that humans quell the terrifying awareness of mortality by investing in cultural belief systems (worldviews) that imbue life with meaning and individuals with significance and self-esteem. The theory has generated over 500 empirical research studies into not only self-esteem and prejudice but also many other forms of social behaviour.

TMT is a psychological theory with social, cultural and political implications. To date, it has been largely ignored by sociology, cultural studies and death studies, but is increasingly being cited within palliative care. This seminar examines TMT, bringing together proponents and critics working in various disciplines.
Programme:

- 14.15: Welcome: Tony Walter, Centre for Death & Society
- 14.20: Overview of TMT from a Psychological Perspective
  Simon McCabe, Psychologist and Lecturer in Management, Work and Organisation, University of Stirling
- 15.00: The Terror of Death and the Rise of Technology
  Stephen Cave, Philosopher and Executive Director of the Leverhulme Centre for the Future of Intelligence, University of Cambridge. Author of the best-seller Immortality.
- 15.40: Break
- 16.00: Trying to Find Death in Terror Management Theory
  John Troyer, Senior Lecturer, Department of Social & Policy Sciences & CDAS Director, University of Bath
- 16.40: Closing discussion

This event is free to attend, please register your place via Eventbrite:

Join us at the University of Bath 50th anniversary festival
06 May 2017
University of Bath

The University of Bath has been celebrating its 50th anniversary with a year-long series of events which come to a head on 6th May when we throw open our doors to the local community for a day-long festival. Come up to campus and enjoy music, dance and food. Meet some of our amazing scientists and researchers. Take up a new sporting challenge. Join a craft workshop or drop in to demos and talks on science, technology and health.

Join CDAS researchers in the Discover Zone and help with current research into caring and responsibilities at the end of life; get creative with collages to tell us your story, vote in our ball pits on what you think the role of health and social care services should be at the end of life, make your bucket list, write a note for a loved one, and consider how you want to be remembered after you’ve gone. Researchers will be on hand to discuss our work with information on recent projects, please feel free to ask us anything!

Handily coinciding with this year’s Dying Matters Awareness Week, we will also be supporting this year’s message ‘What can you do?’

We’d love to see as many of you there as possible, it promises to be a great free day out!

You can find out all about the Festival on the University web page:

CDAS Conference 2017: Booking open
Death at the Margins of the State
09-10 June 2017
The Edge, University of Bath

Human beings typically grant appropriate death rites to those deemed members of the community; withholding of proper rites often reflects or symbolises exclusion from the political or moral community. The history of dissection, for example, bears witness to this.

Today, the concept of ‘human’ extends in theory to everyone regardless of nationality, gender, abilities, etc., yet in practice citizenship (legal or moral) may for many be precarious or lacking. The stateless and/or those lacking full citizen rights may include asylum seekers, undocumented migrants, those on the wrong side in civil wars, victims of genocide, prisoners, travellers, foetuses, and those deemed to lack mental capacity: their deaths may be endorsed, ignored, stigmatised, or manipulated by the state or powerful institutions. By contrast, those who die to create or defend the state become sacred heroes of the nation. Death and the state are intimately connected, each helping – through inclusion and exclusion - to define the other.

CDAS annual conferences bring together research and knowledge that has hitherto been fragmented. We invite scholars and practitioners from around the world willing to engage openly with and learn from different disciplines and perspectives. Everyone is welcome.

A draft programme is now available on our website: http://www.bath.ac.uk/sps/events/news_0135.html

Registration is £140 for 2 days and £75 for a single day, and includes all sessions, lunch and refreshments on the days of attendance, as well as a conference pack. Optional social events are a key part of CDAS conferences, please indicate whether you would like to attend when booking, pay on the day. Booking is now open via our online store.

Death in the Age of Facebook

Issues around social media may feel new, but technology has always created conflict in the way we grieve. John Troyer and Tony Walter from CDAS contributed to this piece, first published 18th April. https://www.cnet.com/news/death-in-the-age-of-facebook/#ftag=COS-05-10aaa0j

Death Studies Community News

Dying Matters Awareness Week 2017

Every year in May, Dying Matters and their coalition members host an Awareness Week, which gives an unparalleled opportunity to place the importance of talking about dying, death and bereavement firmly on the national agenda. This year, we ask What Can You Do?

This aims to get people more active in planning for dying and death and helping support those who may need it in times of grief and bereavement, be they friends, family or in your wider community. If you are planning an event and have not already done so, share the details of your event with Dying Matters who will include it in their online map. To find an event near you, just visit the website: http://www.dyingmatters.org/events. With over 200 events already registered, there’s bound to be something happening near you.

Community of Practice

The Centre for Death & Society (CDAS) at the University of Bath are looking to start a ‘Community of Practice’ around the topic of death, dying and bereavement.

“Communities of Practice are groups of people who share a concern or a passion for something they do and learn how to do it better as they interact regularly.”

We are looking for people who would be interested in joining a network dedicated to discussing these issues frankly and openly, with the aim of learning from and supporting one another to improve the situation of the dying, the bereaved and those who work with them. Membership of the Community is open to anyone who has relevant knowledge, skills or experience that distinguishes them from the general population. The aim is to develop a shared repertoire of resources: experiences; stories; tools; ways of addressing recurring problems, over time and with a range of expertise from different arenas.

CDAS are always looking for partners and collaborators in our research. We need your involvement to make sure we are asking the right questions of the right people at the right time, and we know we have experts on our doorstep who can help us with that. We think we can offer our expertise back to the local community too, and want to explore the ways this might be possible.

An initial meeting will be held at the University of Bath in autumn 2017 for anyone interested in learning more and contributing to the Community. Meetings will be face to face, at least initially, so we anticipate the majority of members coming from our local area, although everyone is welcome. Please contact cdas@bath.ac.uk for further information and to express your interest.
Please note we do not currently have funding in place to support attendance but will be exploring avenues of possible funding over the coming months. Please get in touch and let us know if this would be a barrier for you but you would like to be a part of the community.

Dark Tourism
04 May 2017, 17.00 – 19.00
Queen Anne Court, Room 075, University of Greenwich, Old Royal Naval College, Park Row, Greenwich, SE10 9LS.

The Tourism Research Centre of the University of Greenwich warmly invites you to a free public seminar on Dark Tourism which coincides with the compiling of a special edition of the ‘International Journal of Tourism Cities.’ The theme consists of dark tourism in cities and builds on research carried out by Tourism Research Centre members over a number of years in related fields such as cultural and heritage tourism.

Keynote speakers
- Professor John Lennon: Glasgow Caledonian University, co-author of the seminal work 'Dark Tourism: the attraction of death and disaster'.
The evening will also include a presentation on dark tourism in European cities by Ray Powell and James Kennell (University of Greenwich). Refreshments will be served during the proceedings, which will conclude with a complimentary guided walking tour of the dark history of the Old Royal Naval College, beginning at 7.00pm.

To register please email businessevents@gre.ac.uk with your name and contact details and outlining any special dietary/disability requirements.

Bereavement under the spotlight – supporting people suddenly bereaved in high profile cases
09 May 2017, 14.00 – 15.00GMT
Online

The sudden death of a loved one is always a traumatic experience, but when the death also attracts media attention, this can cause additional distress for families. It is vital that families and individuals who have been traumatically bereaved in high profile cases are provided with the correct guidance and support. This essential webinar will be led by expert academics and practitioners, and will consider the support needs of people whose cases attract interest from the media.

Topics covered will include:
- Guidance for professionals on how they can best support individuals to deal and interact with the media, and discussion of the pros and cons of media engagement
- Advice to bereaved individuals and families on how best to approach the media
- Speakers will also cover best practice guidance around support methods for people whose grief is in the spotlight

We would encourage all support professionals who are responsible for supporting bereaved people to attend this essential, free of charge webinar. This event is particularly helpful for practitioners, support workers and counsellors who may be supporting bereaved people whose case is attracting media attention, or do not have experience in interacting with and approaching the media. This event offers an excellent professional development opportunity to all support workers, therapists and bereavement counsellors.

Dying Well
10 May 2017, 09.00 – 17.00
SS Great Britain, Bristol

Coinciding with Dying Matters week, this interdisciplinary event aims to draw together academics, healthcare professionals, community groups, charities, individuals and artists for discussion over the question of ‘dying well’. Our hope is that alongside stimulating conversation together, the event will generate new research partnerships to apply for small pots of prototype money to explore ideas that emerge at the workshop further. (For past and current prototype projects developed through the Brigstow open call please see http://www.bristol.ac.uk/brigstow/projects/).

The event will take place in the Great Eastern Hall of the SS Great Britain. Our understanding is that this venue is largely accessible. For individual requirements this DisabledGo report might be useful.

Please book via Eventbrite: https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/dying-well-tickets-33110753154

Call for Papers

Death and Time
BSA Social Aspects of Death, Dying and Bereavement Study Group Annual Symposium
01 December 2017
BSA Meeting Room, Imperial Wharf, London, UK

In the edited collection entitled Taming Time, Timing Death, Christensen and Willerslev (2013) note that concepts about time originate with the experience of how things perish. It is through the process of dying and as a result of references to death (e.g. decomposition and social transformation) that time is socially perceived and made tangible. Death and time are then intricately linked – knowable through each other and often defined by one another. Within the sociological literature on death, dying, and bereavement, scholars have written about the various ways in which 'time' of death is constructed. Highlighting for instance how recent categorisations pertaining to the 'end of life' act to define the dying phase, critiquing time-related elements of the medicalisation of grief, and describing how social scripts about death have changed over time. The aim of this one-day symposium is to reflect on and extend this analysis.

We are inviting academics and practitioners to submit abstracts on the theme of time in relation to death, dying, and bereavement. We are particularly keen to encourage a broad and diverse set of papers that engage with (but are not limited to) the following issues:

- Defining moment/s at which death occurs
- Death-related experiences across the life-course
- Changes in social practices related to death, dying and bereavement over time
- Time and the processes of dying and decomposition
- Notions of 'trajectories' in relation to death, dying and bereavement 'Waiting' and other experiential aspects of temporality and death-related experiences
- Time-related metaphors associated with death, dying and bereavement (e.g. 'journeying')
Submit abstracts of no more than 250 words to the organisers by midnight GMT Monday, 18 September 2017. With your submission include your name, affiliation and contact details. Presentations will be 20 minutes long with additional time for questions.

Remember Me. The Changing Face of Memorialisation
05-07 April 2018
Hull, UK

This 2.5-day conference, sponsored by the UK Arts and Humanities Research Council, seeks to explore themes arising from the inter-disciplinary research project Remember Me. The Changing Face of Memorialisation. An associated exhibition and walking trail will run alongside the academic conference, which is open to the general public as well as to conference delegates. The Remember Me project team is comprised of researchers from applied social science, archaeology arts/humanities, history, pastoral theology, photography, political science, social work, socio-medical anthropology and sociology. Researchers in these and cognate fields are invited to submit an abstract (max 250 words) for an oral paper, poster or creative visual exhibit.

Possible themes include, but are not limited to, the following:

i) The influence of role and identity on memorial forms and purposes
ii) Emotional and behavioural aspects of memorialising practices
iii) Religious, spiritual and secular meanings in death
iv) The socio-political construction of death
v) Spaces and places: the geography of memorialisation
vi) Gender, sexuality and age in death and memory
vii) Socio-economic and cultural variations viii) The public/private interface
ix) Applications to the professional cultures of health and social care practice and funeral and memorial services

Submissions from Early Career Researchers and PhD candidates are particularly encouraged. Closing date for submission Friday 1 September 2017.
For more information contact rememberme@hull.ac.uk or visit www.hull.ac.uk/rememberme

Special Issue of Mortality on the topic of “The Materiality and Spatiality of Death, Burial and Commemoration”

Editors: Christoph K. Streb and Thomas Kolnberger
University of Luxembourg

Materiality is more than simple matter, void of meaning or relevance. It is charged with significance, has symbolic and interpretative value – perhaps a form of selfhood. The apparent inanimate has meaning, which originates from the interaction with the animate. Consciously and unconsciously, by interacting with materiality, one is creating meaning, while materiality retroactively provides a form of agency. Spatiality provides the context that permits and shapes such interaction. Thus, artefacts, mementos and memorials are exteriorised, materialised and spatialised forms of human activity: they can be understood as cultural forms, the function of which is to sustain social life. However, they are also the medium through which values, ideas and criteria of social distinction are reproduced, legitimised or transformed.

Death, dying and burial produce artefacts and occur in spatial contexts. The interplay between such materiality, spatiality and the bereaved who commemorate the dead yields interpretations and creates meanings that can change over time. In this special issue of the interdisciplinary journal Mortality, we will explore this interplay by going beyond the consideration of simple grave artefacts on the one hand and graveyards as a space on the other hand, to examine the specific interrelationships between materiality, spatiality, the living and the dead. This call for papers originates from the Transmortality International: Materiality and Spatiality of Death, Burial and Commemoration conference, held 2017 at the University of Luxembourg, organised by the R.I.P. research project.

We invite papers from all disciplines to reflect on the materiality and spatiality of death, burial and commemoration. We suggest the following – non-exhaustive – list of themes:

- The agency of materiality and spatiality
- Theoretical considerations regarding materiality and spatiality in sepulchral culture
- Innovative research methods in the field
- The application of digital humanities to sepulchral culture
- Ethics in the study of death, burial and commemoration
- Ideology and/or politics
- Regional and cultural contexts, including migration and transborder issues relating to sepulchral culture.

This special issue will be published in 2019. Potential contributors should send their full paper to christoph.streb@uni.lu by 17:00 CET on Fri, 2 February 2018. The journal’s style guidelines should be followed for all submissions: http://bit.ly/2pdhEET

All papers must be explicit in their consideration of issues of materiality and spatiality in death, burial or commemoration. International contributions are encouraged, as are submissions from authors at all stages of their careers. We welcome conversations and informal enquiries with prospective authors prior to submission. Please contact us via christoph.streb@uni.lu

Submissions will be peer-reviewed and potential authors notified by Fri, 20 April 2018. Resubmissions of revised papers are expected by Fri, 31 August 2018 and final drafts must be ready for submission by Mon, 31 December 2018.
