January 2017 Director’s Note:

Welcome to 2017’s first CDAS newsletter.

This month’s note will be short as I am currently marking essays and preparing the required documentation for UK Citizenship. It takes a lot of paperwork to become British.

2017 is going to be a great year for CDAS. We have a number of new global initiatives involving CDAS and I will be writing about these during 2017.

Please remember to submit an abstract for the CDAS 2017 conference June 9-10. The submission deadline is 27 February. This year’s conference theme is ‘Death at the Margins of the State’ and I am really looking forward to the presentations.

Happy 2017.

CDAS Conference 2017: Call for Papers and booking open

Death at the Margins of the State
09-10 June 2017
The Edge, University of Bath

Human beings typically grant appropriate death rites to those deemed members of the community; withholding of proper rites often reflects or symbolises exclusion from the political or moral community. The history of dissection, for example, bears witness to this.

Today, the concept of ‘human’ extends in theory to everyone regardless of nationality, gender, abilities, etc., yet in practice citizenship (legal or moral) may for many be precarious or lacking. The stateless and/or those lacking full citizen rights may include asylum seekers, undocumented migrants, those on the wrong side in civil wars, victims of genocide, prisoners, travellers, foetuses, and those deemed to lack mental capacity: their deaths may be endorsed, ignored, stigmatised, or manipulated by the state or powerful institutions. By contrast, those who die to create or defend the state become sacred heroes of the nation. Death and the state are intimately connected, each helping – through inclusion and exclusion - to define the other.

- What deaths and whose deaths are denied respect?
• How, why, and with what consequences for defining ‘us and them’, ‘human and non-human’?
• How do those without citizenship die and how are they disposed of and mourned?
• How do funerals mark lives deemed worthless?
• How are marginalised deaths and the bodies of the marginalised dead exploited — by politicians, media, medicine, museums, and the global trade in body parts and ancient human remains?

Abstracts are invited for contemporary or historical papers from any discipline or profession exploring the relationship between death and exclusion from community or state. The conference will interest those in a wide range of fields, including, for example, death studies, politics, anthropology, history, archaeology, international relations, international development, refugee & migration studies, social policy, photography, cultural studies, psychology and funeral celebrancy.

CDAS annual conferences bring together research and knowledge that has hitherto been fragmented. We invite scholars and practitioners from around the world willing to engage openly with and learn from different disciplines and perspectives.

20 minute papers are invited - abstracts (up to 250 words) to be emailed to cdas@bath.ac.uk by 27 February 2017. Posters are also welcome, please send your abstract as above.

Registration is £140 for 2 days and £75 for a single day, and includes all sessions, lunch and refreshments on the days of attendance, as well as a conference pack. Optional social events are a key part of CDAS conferences, please indicate whether you would like to attend when booking, pay on the day. Booking is now open via our online store.

Conference updates will appear on the webpage: http://www.bath.ac.uk/sps/events/news_0135.html

CDAS Seminar: Terror Management Theory
04 May 2017, 14.15 – 17.00
3 East 2.4, University of Bath, UK

Drawing on cultural anthropologist Ernest Becker’s work, terror management theory (TMT) posits that humans quell the terrifying awareness of mortality by investing in cultural belief systems (worldviews) that imbue life with meaning and individuals with significance and self-esteem. The theory has generated over 500 empirical research studies into not only self-esteem and prejudice but also many other forms of social behaviour.

TMT is a psychological theory with social, cultural and political implications. To date, it has been largely ignored by sociology, cultural studies and death studies, but is increasingly being cited within palliative care. This seminar examines TMT, bringing together proponents and critics working in various disciplines.
Programme:

14.15: Welcome: Tony Walter, Centre for Death & Society
14.20: Overview of TMT from a Psychological Perspective
   Simon McCabe, Psychologist and Lecturer in Management, Work and Organisation, University of Stirling
15.00: The Terror of Death and the Rise of Technology
   Stephen Cave, Philosopher and Executive Director of the Leverhulme Centre for the Future of Intelligence, University of Cambridge. Author of the best-seller Immortality.
15.40: Break
16.00: Trying to Find Death in Terror Management Theory
   John Troyer, Senior Lecturer, Department of Social & Policy Sciences & CDAS Director, University of Bath
16.40: Closing discussion

This event is free to attend, please register your place via Eventbrite:

CDAS PhD Student has first solo-authored publication in Death Studies

Renkse Visser, CDAS PhD Student, has had her first solo-authored paper published in Death Studies (2017) 41 (1) pp6-13.

‘Doing death. Reflecting on the researcher’s subjectivity and emotions’, considers the complexity of subjectivity within death studies. She considers the cultural background of the research, the personal/professional boundaries and the emotional responses participants can affect on researchers. She draws on her experiences of being a Dutch researcher in a UK context, of personal loss and the death of a research participant.

New Bereavement Benefit payments

The current system of bereavement benefits, including Bereavement Payment, Bereavement Allowance and Widowed Parent’s Allowance, will be replaced with a new single Bereavement Support Payment. This will be introduced for new claims from April 2017. Social Fund Funeral Payments are not affected by this reform.

Dying Matters Awareness Week 2017 launched

This year’s Dying Matters Awareness Week was successfully launched at a sold out event in London on 23rd January. This year’s theme, ‘Working Together with our Communities’ was introduced by Clare Henry and Gary Rycroft, both of Dying Matters and NCPC, where new resources were showcased and plans for the week were discussed. Representatives from a number of organisations and community initiatives then took the stage to share their experiences of past work, and suggest possible future ways of working.

You can read more about the event and access all the presentations online at: http://www.dyingmatters.org/page/dates-your-diary-2017

A second sold out launch event will take place at Wirral Hospice St. John’s on 1st February 2017.

If you are planning a Dying Matters Awareness Week event and would like support, buy or download resources, or just want to know more, visit the Dying Matters website for inspiration. Don’t forget to add details of what you are up to on their events calendar. http://www.dyingmatters.org/

Christian perspectives on death and dying
London/Frome
28 January/11 February 2017

'Christian perspectives on death and dying' is a national ecumenical project to support Christians to engage with contemporary debates around death and dying. All are welcome to join us for a day of conversation, reflection and debate in London or Frome addressing:

- Advance decisions (‘Living Wills’) – making end of life decisions for yourself
- Providing and withdrawing medical treatment – making decisions for those who have lost the ability to decide for themselves
- Assisted dying – legal, social and theological perspectives.

Bereavement Research into Practice
28 February 2017, 10.30 – 16.00
National Children’s Bureau, Wakley Street, London

New developments in bereavement research are expanding our understanding of what it means to be bereaved and what can help in times of grief.

Researchers, practitioners and policymakers need to share insights and generate ideas together to make sure that research informs practice, and that practice helps identify the next questions we need research to answer.

Join us for a day of networking for bereavement researchers and practitioners. The seminar will be a chance for bereavement researchers to share their findings with practitioners, and for practitioners to help shape the future of bereavement research, across sociology, psychology and other disciplines.

Presenters will reflect on aspects of the research process, sharing insights from their current projects.

- Designing research for a study on the impact on families of assisted dying
  Janette Fish, Lancaster University
- Recruiting and caring for participants in a study on predictors of Complicated Grief
  Dr Kirsten Smith, University of Oxford
- The impact of practical support on bereaved partners and parents of military personnel: findings from an evaluation
  Dr Liz Rolls, University of Gloucestershire
- Findings from an efficacy study of volunteer bereavement support
  Cate Newsom, University of Utrecht and Cruse Bereavement Care, Scotland

We will also be launching the findings of the National Bereavement Alliance’s consultation on the main evidence gaps for bereavement care, which will help to drive the agenda for bereavement research. If you haven’t answered the consultation survey already, you can do so at

Morbid Fascination: Dark Tourism in the American West

Places of death, suffering, and disaster compel our attention; they both intrigue and repel us. Morbid fascination draws tourists to sites as diverse as Pompeii, Auschwitz, and Chernobyl. A growing body of scholarship considers the impulse to visit these places of misfortune and catastrophe and, especially, the mediation and shaping of these sites into touristic destinations. Much of this work, however, has focused on places outside the geographical boundaries of the American West. This collection of essays aims to expand our understanding of Dark Tourism within the context of the West. We invite proposals exploring a range of Western Dark Tourism sites and topics.
Submission details: Proposals for submissions to this collection should include a title, contact information (email, phone, address, including preferred means of contact), and a 500-word abstract. Proposals and enquires to adkisoj@hsu.edu, deadline 15 February 2017.

Editor: Dr. Jennifer Dawes Adkison, Associate Professor of English, Henderson State University, Arkadelphia, Arkansas, adkisoj@hsu.edu

Annual Meeting of the Society for Social Studies of Science (4S)
Boston, Massachusetts
30 August – 02 September 2017
Sheraton Boston Hotel, 39 Dalton Street

Conference theme: STS (In)Sensibilities
Panel 37. Necropolitics
Organized by: Mara Dicenta-Vilker, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

This panel looks for contributions around the material semiotics of death, dead subjects, and killing/elimination that engage with the political and scientific processes by which they are maintained, resignified, or disrupted.

Digital Existence II: Precarious Media Life Conference
30 October – 01 November 2017
Sigtuna Foundation, nr Stockholm, Sweden

Digital media have the power to transform our existence, raising new questions and creating new vulnerabilities as part of the experience of being human in the digital age. Big data and hyperconnectivity, tracking and trolling, digital life and digital death are only some of the issues that require an existential media analysis that underlines the precarity of human existence. The conference’s exploratory workshop format will critically map the various digital vulnerabilities that face us in our contemporary media age and hopefully create new trajectories of thought.

Deadline for abstract submission: 15 March.
The conference is a joint venture between the DIGMEX research network and the Nordic Network for the Study of Media and Religion.

Eighteenth Colloquium on Cemeteries
19 May 2017
University of York

This event takes place in York every year and comprises a day meeting of scholars with an interest in cemeteries and burial. Disciplines that are routinely represented include history, art history, sociology, anthropology, historical archaeology, landscape design and architecture, conservation and policy analysis. The Colloquium often draws international speakers. A key aspect of the event is its informality: a focus on discussion makes this a highly valuable forum in which to present new and emerging research.

Abstracts of no more than 250 words should be sent to julie.rugg@york.ac.uk. Please ensure that the abstract is in Word format. Any queries about the event should in the first instance be directed by email to the address given.

The deadline for abstracts is 10th April 2017.

Further information on the Colloquium is available at: https://www.york.ac.uk/spsw/research/cemetery-research-group/colloquium/

Jobs and study opportunities

PhD Studentships in Health, Wellbeing and Social Care
Open University - Faculty of Wellbeing, Education and Language Studies.

The Faculty of Wellbeing, Education and Language Studies is funding full-time PhD studentships for an October 2017 start. Achieving good health and supporting effective social care for all is essential to achieving social justice, and this lies at the heart of the Open University’s mission. We are keen to attract students to work with us on research that locates the experiences of service users, ‘patients’, carers, family members and practitioners at the fore of inquiry. We place value on participatory and inclusive research particularly with individuals that are marginalised, ‘hard to reach’ or have complex needs. Our research draws on various methodologies and forms of analysis and much is based on multidisciplinary work across the social sciences, in particular drawing on medical sociology, critical psychology, anthropology and other critical, applied social sciences. We also have places for part-time self-funded students.

Applications are invited on one or more of the following themes:

- age, ageing and later life
- children, young people, parenting and families
- death, dying and bereavement
• disability and long-term conditions
• reproductive and sexual health

For more information on the application process see: http://www.open.ac.uk/postgraduate/research-degrees/how-to-apply/mphil-and-phd-application-process

To inquire about these studentships contact Dr Lindsay O’Dell by email: hwsc-research-degrees@open.ac.uk

Closing date - 17 March. Interviews - May 2017
