Course Description

Course Summary	Understand and investigate society and social structures. Using social theory and research methods, you'll study the processes that shape people's lives.
Course Description	This course will give you an in-depth understanding of the structure of society. You will investigate the roles of its dominant institutions, social structures, and cultural practices, as well as sources of inequalities and conflict. By applying social theories, you'll learn about the foundations of modern society and how we can positively change it. This will be learnt in the context of British society and other societies around the world. In Year 1, you'll be introduced to social theory, ideas about the state and social change, and the central traditions of social research. You'll have the chance to take optional units in criminology and international development to broaden your learning. In Year 2, you'll study units that deepen your understanding of contemporary social theory and techniques of data analysis. You'll choose from a range of options in sociology, social policy, criminology and international development. In your final year, you'll do your dissertation. This will demonstrate the knowledge and skills you'll develop. You'll also choose from a range of optional units from across the social sciences. These will allow you to build upon the theoretical understanding you'll gain during Years 1 and 2 and apply it to contemporary sociological issues. The flexibility of this course will allow you to create a degree that's tailored to your interests and potential future career. Informed teaching to advance your learning You'll learn from teaching staff with expertise in different areas of sociology. Their passion, knowledge and research shape our teaching to provide you with an enhanced learning experience.

Contact hours

Contact hours

Timetabled contact hours, which may be made up of laboratory sessions, lectures, practical sessions, seminars, tutorials and workshops, vary throughout your course and between courses but are typically between 8 and 10 hours a week in your first year.

Our teaching for this course is delivered through in-person learning on campus, supported by high quality online provision. A small proportion of these contact hours may be delivered online, with the significant majority taught on campus. This may be supplemented by additional activities such as a small number of online learning sessions (not live), skills development sessions, and personal tutorials.

The amount of timetabled sessions on campus in later years may vary based on the options you choose, with a greater emphasis on independent learning. Project and dissertation units will generally have fewer scheduled sessions to allow you time for your independent work - this may also mean the number of hours of timetabled sessions each week will vary within a year.

Independent learning

In addition to timetabled contact hours, you are expected to undertake independent learning and assessment activities. Typically, this might be around 25 to 32 hours per week in your first year, and include independent learning, including individual research, reading journal articles and books, working on individual and group projects, preparing coursework assignments, presentations, or revising for exams. After your first year, the emphasis on independent learning becomes greater, for example, you may do a final year project in the final year. You'll work on your own and as part of groups.

Assessment summary

You will be assessed in a range of methods designed to develop and test your skills and knowledge.

10% to 25% of your course will be assessed through examinations.

75% to 90% will be assessed through essays, reports, and presentations.

The balance of examinations and coursework may depend on the optional units you choose.

The final degree classification is determined by your second and final year marks and each contributes 32% and 68% respectively.

You will primarily be assessed as an individual, but may also be assessed as part of a group.

We can make reasonable adjustments to assessment procedures for students with disabilities, take a look at our Disability Service's pages\(/professional-services/disability-service/\) for information.
