

Taking your assessments

This year, the University is focusing its no detriment measures on providing more flexibility around your assessment attempts. This is in recognition that each individual student will be affected differently by COVID-19 disruption; support is available if you think your assessment attempt will be impacted by the circumstances you are experiencing.

Thank you for your comments about what would be most useful to you in terms of the timing and content of assessment information. Guidance for undertaking exams and assessments is now online at an assessment information hub: <https://www.bath.ac.uk/topics/exams-and-assessments/>. You can find the Student Guide to Assessment, Semester 1 2020/21, as well as up-to-date information about Individual Mitigating Circumstances (IMCs) and exam deferrals. There are also links to important support services such as the SU Advice Centre, the Disability Service, and the Wellbeing Service.

At <https://www.bath.ac.uk/topics/exams-and-assessments/> you can also find helpful guides and how-to videos for using Inspira during the exam period, as well as the information you'll need as background when you take your exams, including the exam schedule. You will hear more from your department about the format of your exams.

This assessment webpage will continue to be updated so please consider it a first port of call for information about how and when to take your exams as well as what to do if something goes wrong. The exams telephone helpline will be available during the exam period.

Timetabling

We appreciate all the comments that help us to understand how the student experience of the timetable works in practice, and we will be working to further understand this as we plan for future timetables. Your timetable is a mix of centrally scheduled activity, and department scheduled activity, agreed in consultation with your department. If you need further guidance about changes in your timetable please speak to your Director of Studies.

The timetable for semester 2 will be available on 15 January 2021. This is later than in previous years but this is to allow departments time to reflect, review and change plans where necessary to positively build on the changes already made to IPT in semester 1. Please be aware that as with semester 1, there may be local changes made by your department across the semester as part of the Bath Blend.

Taking your assessments

This year, the University is focusing its no detriment measures on providing more flexibility around your assessment attempts. This is in recognition that each individual student will be affected differently by COVID-19 disruption; support is available if you think your assessment attempt will be impacted by the circumstances you are experiencing.

Thank you for your comments about what would be most useful to you in terms of the timing and content of assessment information. Guidance for undertaking exams and assessments is now online at an assessment information hub: <https://www.bath.ac.uk/topics/exams-and-assessments/>. You can find the Student Guide to Assessment, Semester 1 2020/21, as well as up-to-date information about Individual Mitigating Circumstances (IMCs) and exam deferrals. There are also links to important support services such as the SU Advice Centre, the Disability Service, and the Wellbeing Service.

At <https://www.bath.ac.uk/topics/exams-and-assessments/> you can also find helpful guides and how-to videos for using Inspira during the exam period, as well as the information you'll need as background when you take your exams, including the exam schedule. You will hear more from your department about the format of your exams.

This assessment webpage will continue to be updated so please consider it a first port of call for information about how and when to take your exams as well as what to do if something goes wrong. The exams telephone helpline will be available during the exam period.

Timetabling

We appreciate all the comments that help us to understand how the student experience of the timetable works in practice, and we will be working to further understand this as we plan for future timetables. Your timetable is a mix of centrally scheduled activity, and department scheduled activity, agreed in consultation with your department. If you need further guidance about changes in your timetable please speak to your Director of Studies.

The timetable for semester 2 will be available on 15 January 2021. This is later than in previous years but this is to allow departments time to reflect, review and change plans where necessary to positively build on the changes already made to IPT in semester 1. Please be aware that as with semester 1, there may be local changes made by your department across the semester as part of the Bath Blend.

Ms Rachel Sheer
Acting Director
Academic Registry